Dr. Gottwas the forty-ninth national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic which during the year occupied the time and attention of the 2,000 veterans of the eighteen posts, comprising the Department of Potomac, which lies wholly within the city of Washington. After speaking of the public-spirited citizens' committee, headed by William F. Gude, who had taken up the work with so much energy and enthusiasm. "in spite of singularly adverse conditions, with business unusually depressed, and succeeded in raising a sufficient sum of money to give an entertainment befitting the National Capital," Col. McElroy declared what "the city of Washington is of itself a great museum of history to every visitor."

The acting department commander referred with feeling to the patriotic and public spirit of the heirs of the late Matthew G. Emery in giving to the Department of Potomac the use of the Emery building, which for the week of the national encampment, boused an automatic properties of the late Matthew G. V. Cox and Capt. Emery's heirs for their generous thought."

He expressed the gratitude of the Department of the Potomac in being able to assist in dedicating at the forty-ninth national encampment, fifty years after peace at Appomattox, the corner stone of the great amphitheater in Arlington, which lies so close to Washington that it will add much to the beauty and sentimental interest of the national capital.

Thanks Kindred Organizations.

The acting department commander gave high praise to Mrs. W. E. Andrews. chairman of the woman's executive committee of the national encampment and to Mrs. Mamie Palmer Dorsey, president of the Department of Potonac, Woman's Relief Corps; Mrs. Rose Rutledge, president of the Daughters' Auxiliary; to Miss Hamilton of the Daughters of Veterans, and to Mrs Lothe splendid work they did in assisting the citizens' committee to make ine citizens committee to make the national encantpment the perfect success that it was; to Col. Harts, superintendent of public buildings and grounds, and to Elliott Woods, superintendent of the Capitol, for their generous assistance in carrying out the plans of the department for the entertainment of the veterans; to Col. Wilder and many others for their unflagging zeal and assistance.

He referred to the fact that not so many years had elapsed since the Capitol building was without a flag except when Congress was in session, and that other great department buildings in Washington had the flag pulled down on all holidays in the departments regardless of whether they were business or patriotic days.

Col. McElroy was slated for election as department commander by the committee on nomination. Elections will be held at a second business meeting Monday night. national encantament the perfect suc
